Three Senior Marketing Executives Join Cohen & Steers

New York, June 14, 2010—Cohen & Steers, Inc. (NYSE: CNS) announced the addition of three senior marketing executives to its New York headquarters.

Anthony D. Ialeggio is a senior vice president and director of global marketing and product development. He will work with the firm's senior management to drive the growth of retail and institutional marketing and distribution. Mr. Ialeggio was previously a managing director of marketing at AllianceBernstein, which he joined in 2000. Before that, he was vice president of e-business and product development at GE Capital.

James MacPherson is a senior vice president and director of new product development and strategy. He is responsible for identifying competitive market opportunities and developing new investment products to capitalize on those opportunities. Before joining Cohen & Steers, Mr. MacPherson was with Nuveen Investments and Merrill Lynch.

Brendan R. Murray has joined as vice president and director of national accounts. His team manages and coordinates key distribution relationships for the retail channel's strategic partners, and will also develop the private client segment. Mr. Murray began his career at Putnam Investments, and came to Cohen & Steers from American Century Investments.

"We are fortunate to have three new marketing executives of this caliber," said Robert Steers, co-chairman and co-chief executive officer of Cohen & Steers. "Tony's experience will enable us to identify and execute successful strategies for our retail and institutional businesses. Jim's background is ideally suited to develop, manage and enhance our investment products. And Brendan brings the right blend of experience and strong relationships with our key distribution partners."
